

Attack plan

The idea is to connect a first time and create a login file with the same name as the secret file; then, while the first connection is still active, create a new connection and select the `p` function, which will copy the flag in the login file; finally, use the first connection to read the file. To guess the random name we can use more than one connection.