

In 64b binaries, the first 6 arguments of `printf()` come the registers, so the random padding of the stack may be ineffective if any of these registers contains something useful.