

The `c.arg` array is not terminated if the input doesn't contain a newline.

We can exploit this bug to defeat PIE: if we send 8 bytes to the `e` command without any newline, the `echo` function will print our bytes followed by the contents of the `f` pointer (which contains the address of `echo` itself).